WE MAKE IT POSSIBLE

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

With information technology and software programmed gadgets replacing a vast number of jobs previously carried out by humans, there is a forecasted demand for Information Technology-competent graduates.

With the advancement of web-based commerce and business, web developers responsible for creating dynamic pages to provide interaction between users and online businesses are in demand. An Information Technology programme graduate will be able to aspire for this position as they will be equipped with the technical and analytical skills required for developing user-website interface.

Many organisations are heavily dependent on IT products such as operating systems, servers and networking tools for day to-day operations. These organizations are in continuous demand for system administrators and IT support personnel. Graduates from Diploma or Advanced Diploma of IT programmes will be able to take up these jobs with the skills and knowledge they acquired to install, upgrade and configure operating systems and handle complex support operations.
